Where Technology Meets Human Leadership

Technology has been a central part of Tara Myshrall's career for more than two decades.

With over 20 years of experience in enterprise technology, data analytics and digital transformation, Tara has worked with organizations across Canada helping leaders turn complex data into insight and meaningful action.

Throughout her career, she has worked with some of the most recognized technology ecosystems in the world, including Dell, Information Builders, TIBCO, Talend and Qlik, supporting organizations in building stronger data strategies, improving analytics capabilities, and making more informed decisions.

Her expertise spans business intelligence, predictive analytics, data quality and big data, helping industries such as healthcare, public sector organizations and enterprise companies use technology to improve outcomes and drive innovation.

But Tara's perspective on technology has always gone beyond the tools themselves. She believes that true transformation happens when technology, data and people evolve together.

As artificial intelligence reshapes how organizations operate, Tara brings a grounded and human-centered approach to innovation, helping leaders understand how to adopt technology responsibly while empowering the people behind it.

"Technology may shape the future, but people will always lead it."
